- Establishing God as the source of the world
 - Verse 1 is not necessarily about creation out of nothing (Westermann, May, Gunton)
 - An event of the past (Gunton, 15-16)
- Heaven and earth
- Seven days
 - Instantaneous or taking time?
 - Structuring principle (Gunton, 17)
- Spirit of God
- Sun and moon as creatures
 - De-deification of the heavenly bodies (Gunton, 18, following Jenson, 22)
- God's dominion over the waters

 - Christ as the framework of all (Gunton, 22)

THE LETTER TO THE HEBREWS

- Opening verses
 - Agency of the Son in creation
- Verse 11:3
- The opening verses of the Letter to the Hebrews “is a classical statement of the double function of Christ in creation, at once to mediate the creation of the world and to sustain it once it is made. It brings out again the point that Christian belief in creation is not a general product of reason, but a very specific credal affirmation which implies both origination and continuing interaction and upholding.” (Gunton, 21)

REVELATION

- Verse 4:11
 - Creation as freely willed by God
- Chapter 21
 - New creation
 - Connection with the end of Isaiah
